

SAFE, LEGAL and FREE METHODS TO DOWNLOAD PICTURES

“Just let me use Google Images!!!!”

Sorry, no can do....the following disclaimer is from Google explaining why:

“The images identified by the Google Image Search service may be protected by copyrights. Although you can locate and access the images through our service, we cannot grant you any rights to use them for any purpose other than viewing them on the web. Accordingly, if you would like to use any images you have found through our service, we advise you to contact the site owner to obtain the requisite permissions.”

However, no student should ever contact a stranger on the Internet for any reason, so your friendly LRC Staff suggests any and all of the following:

- 1. Copy the image directly from one of our Internet subscriptions, such as our online encyclopedias, online databases, or our online periodicals. As we pay a yearly subscription to these services, we do not need requisite permissions to copy their graphics.
You must cite these sources as Online Images.
- 2. Scan a graphic from a book. Legally, you can direct-copy/scan up to 10% of any book, as long as you don't exceed more than 5 pictures from any artist/photographer.
- 3. *You must cite these sources as Print Images.
- 4. Take a digital photo yourself. You are the “owner” of said photo, so there is no need for permission. Digital cameras can be checked out through the LRC Circulation Desk.
By all means, give yourself some credit and cite these as Print Images.
- 5. Use any graphic library or gallery from any of the school's computer software applications. Software site licenses allow for users to incorporate graphics from these applications into their own documents without permissions. Microsoft Office is the biggest and best with near daily updates.
 No need to cite this source!!!!
- 6. Using the Internet RESPONSIBLY
Use Google Advanced Image Search with a “.gov” or a “.mil” in the domain search field.
 - Any URL containing “.gov” or “.mil” is free and legal to copy without permission.
 - Search with the term “public domain” added to your keyword (s) in the search field
 - Any public domain site is a common culture site where the content is free and legal to use for commercial or non-commercial purposes
 - Then, be sure to read the site to see how the phrase “public domain” is being used
 - Not a Public Domain example
 - Public Domain example
 - Read the legal disclaimers on the site
 - Pepsi-Cola site permits one download
 - Coca-Cola site permits more than one download, but only within a specific section of their site
 - NFL site requires written permission
You must cite these sources as Online Images.
